in this and other ways made an important contribution to the theatre of our time.

He was dedicated to theatre experiment, but imaginative qualities and sensibility as an artist were added to this. Though he was never to see theatre-in-the-round accepted as widely as he hoped, at least he saw many of his theories and demonstrations at least he saw many of his theories and demonstrations accepted as widely as he hoped, at least he saw many of his theories and demonstrations accepted as widely as he hoped, at least he saw many of his theories and demonstrations accepted as widely as he hoped, at least he was probable to the same of hearter, and it least he was a lively personality to the end and work.

Stephen Joseph, the son of Michael Joseph, the publisher, and Hermione Gingold, trained at the Central School of Speech Training and Dramatic Art, and for a time was on the staff.
