Lady Violet and Robert Shaw

MAKING effective use of the power of words may be the actor's basic skill, but it is also that of all public speakers and writers with something to communicate, thought theirs is more a creative than an interpretative approach. Occasionally, however, the two skills are found in one person, as with Lady Violet Bonham-Carter, who has just recorded the lecture she delivered to the Royal College of Physicians in 1951.

Lady Violet has an intuitive feeling for words and she explores their use in the whole field of present-day communication—public speaking, radio, television, the write feeling for words and she explores their use in the whole field of present-day communication—public speaking, radio, television, the write feeling for words and she explores their use in the whole field of present-day communication—public standard or the properties of the purpose of his reading, who is the properties of
